

Umbraco Contour

What it's good for: Form-building, questionnaires or appointment booking forms that are easy to implement.

Kicking things off with our most-used package, Contour comes at a cost of around £80.

Contour is a form-building package that gives clients the flexibility to add forms to their website and tweak them to their exact requirements, e.g. textboxes, dropdown lists and date pickers.

Contour can also be used for questionnaires, polls or appointment booking forms. It's versatile and so easy to use for non-technical editors. Integrating client branding can also be done within a few clicks.

Umbraco CropUp

What it's good for: Dynamic cropping and creating responsive images. Strong, engaging imagery is key to many of our client's websites but uploading images in all different sizes and aspect ratios can become a very time consuming task. CropUp cuts time spent on images in half. After uploading a single image to the media section of your site, CropUp will ask you to select the crop for each size image that your site uses (e.g. banner image, listing image, featured article).

CropUp also sets up the main focus of your uploaded image, so that any other crops that are done on the site will always be cropped into the focal point of the image.

What it's good for: More control on how content is assembled

The Data Grid is essentially a group of content types which can be smartly grouped together to give more control on how content is assembled. Think of it as a repeatable block of content types – a handy feature when working with content that requires multiple fields, such as an Accordion, Slider, Carousel, etc.

What it's good for: Showing an exact location on a website

Once the pin has been dropped in the CMS, we can use the data to plot this on a Google Map for a website. There's also the option to drop multiple pins on the same map, like the example below.

What it's good for: Speeding up website build whilst keeping the quality at its highest

It allows us to pick and choose the elements that make up a site from a library of features that we have developed over the last 5 years (building over 130 websites!), and then adapt each feature to the client's needs without having to start each website build from scratch.
